

Peter Petkoff

Short Bio

Dr Peter Petkoff is a Senior Law Lecturer at the Brunel Law School. He is also Director of the Religion, Law and International Relations Programme, a collaborative international research network at Regent's Park College, Oxford, and Managing Editor of the Oxford Journal of Law and Religion. He is Legal Consultant on Media Freedom and Freedom of Expression for the Representative on Freedom of the Media at the Organisation for Security and Cooperation in Europe, and has been a TEPSA consultant of the European Parliament as well as a consultant for the All Party Parliamentary Group on International Freedom of Religion or Belief at the House of Lords. Peter is involved in cutting edge research on the relationship between religion and politics and law and religion. In his capacity as Director of the Religion, Law and International Relations Programme at Regent's Park College, Oxford, he brings together lawyers, theologians, philosophers, social and political scientists and aims to develop innovative interdisciplinary strategies for studying law, religion and international relations from legal and theological perspectives.

He is currently writing a book for Oxford University Press on Holy Sites under International Law.

Through his work, he engages with academics, policy makers, lawyers, religious leaders and think tanks working in the field of religion and public life. In addition to academic his work has had impact on policy makers and on the ways religious communities articulate their public self-perception and their attitude to law, civic values, secularism and to their own internal normative systems. He belongs to several international research networks which study the broader questions of law and religion and religion and politics. He has extensive contacts with human rights lawyers as well as with Jewish, Islamic and Christian lawyers working in this area.

Peter Petkoff

Statement

For more than ten years I have been involved in cutting edge research on the relationship between religion and politics and law and religion, presenting papers at high impact events, managing research projects and convening major international conferences.

I take a particular research interest in interdisciplinary approaches to legal protection of places of worship and the protection of tangible and intangible forms of religious cultural heritage, which increasingly intersect with other concerns, including innovation, sustainable development and security.

I have long recognised the importance of bringing together academics and policy makers and have done this in my role as Director of the Religion, Law and International Relations Programme at Regent's Park College, Oxford, and as part of several international research networks, which study the broader questions of law, religion and politics. I am also Managing Editor of a peer-reviewed international journal of law and religion and in this capacity convene the Oxford Journal of Law and Religion Academy, which runs policy and academic events in the UK and overseas. I am also one of the conveners of the annual G20 Inter-Faith Summit on Religion and Development.

By my experience and multi-vectored interdisciplinary and policy-oriented perspectives I will support and further strengthen the EUARE's commitment to research, teaching excellence and international collaboration.
